TREASURES IN PHOTOGRAPHS

The advent of photography in America in 1842 has given us access to the precious heritage of our forebears' likenesses. What was previously available only to persons with the time and money to sit for painted portraits, suddenly became popular for all.

Theoretically, it is possible that anyone who lived beyond 1842 in the US may have had their likeness preserved through the skill of a daguerreotypist, but in actuality, it is not until the Civil War era that the possibility becomes a likelihood, and then only for persons with a special occasion to celebrate, such as a marriage, birthday or entry into military service.

Preservation of these fragile, early images is difficult. Daguerreotypes, ambrotypes and tintypes are particularly prone to scratches and simple breakage. They are also very difficult to label and many an ancestral visage stares anonymously out at us across the years, to our great loss. It is not until the paper-based prints of the late 1800s such as albumin prints, that identifiable pictures of good quality are common.

In response to the request in the latest SANBORN SIGNATURES for pictures pre-dating 1900, we have received a wonderful assortment of copies. One of the best preserved is the remarkable picture at the right of Deborah Bowden Sanborn and her second husband, John Robinson of Exeter, ME. While the picture is undated, the style of clothing suggests late 1850s to mid-1860s. (To date accurately by clothing, it is necessary to have a detailed knowledge of both stylistic trends and when those trends were popular in a particular area.) The SFA looks forward to receiving more such copies!

MORE PIONEERING SANBORNS: DESCENDANTS OF JOHN DREW SANBORN (#1524)

An extremely accomplished branch of the Sanborn family has made its presence known through an interesting series of coincidences and inspires the present article. In November of 1984 we received an illustrated Sanborn history of some of John Drew Sanborn's descendants compiled by Devin and Brian Carroll and Wayne Raymond. This work detailed the movement of much of John's family west from Sanbornton, NH to Pomona, CA beginning with the 1853 move to Medford, MN.

In mid-1986, the Association received a letter from a woman in Modesto, CA who had custody of the papers of Dr. James Allen. Dr. Allen had married a granddaughter of John Drew Sanborn and after her death had married the aunt of the woman in Modesto. Many of the pertinent Sanborn papers from this collection were graciously donated to the SFA and turned out to contain a remarkable set of old photographs and biographical details about John Drew Sanborn's eldest son's family. We thanked our friend in Modesto in that last issue of SANBORN SIGNATURES and heard from SFA member, Ann Lester Hillier, a great-great-granddaughter of John Drew Sanborn, who was able to add further detail to the story and identified the individuals in the picture shown below.

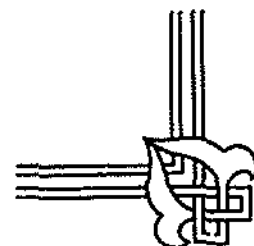

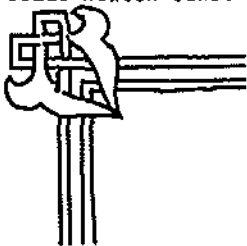

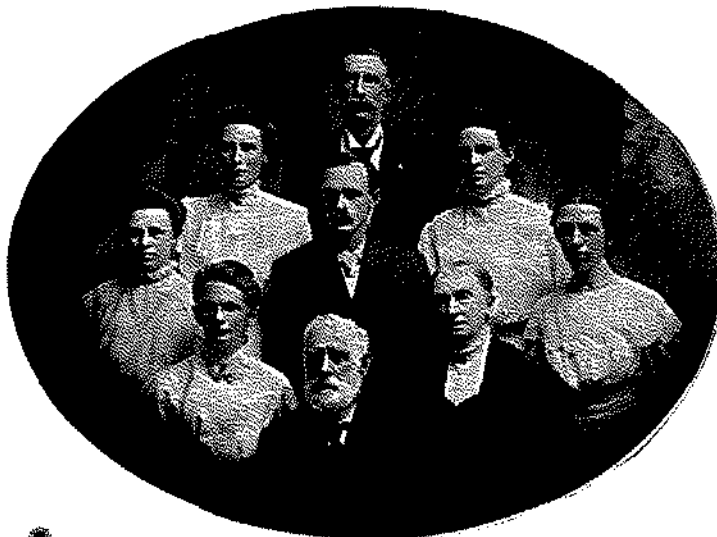

Thank you to each and every one who helped to put this family story together. We pay particular attention to the life of Amelia Sanborn Allen here. Although she leaves no living descendants, her contributions are lasting ones.

John Drew Sanborn and his wife Huldah E. Frye were progenitors of a very accomplished line. Their descendants have included a very famous ornithologist, a head of the Atomic Energy Commission and past president of both Rice and Stanford universities, a popular President of the Los Angeles City Council, among many other dedicated professionals.

Of John and Huldah's four children, all sons, three survived to adulthood. In 1853, when their eldest son was 22 and their youngest just 7 years old, the family, along with John's younger brother, Ransom and his family, moved to Medford, MN. After 15 years, the Sanborns moved again, this time to Windsor, MO where John grew apples and operated a cider press, producing apple cider vinegar and dried apples.

Each of the three Sanborn sons married women from the East (see chart on p. 5). Isaac and Alfred married the Sawyer sisters, daughters of Joseph and Anne (Chapin) Sawyer of Warner, NH. John married Julia Shipman Kendall of Belchertown, MA. John and Huldah lived to see all but three of their 14 grandchildren before dying in Missouri in 1876 and 1878, respectively. continued

The autobiographical account by Amelia Sanborn Allen gives life to these Midwest years:

(From THE RECORD OF AN AMATEUR ORNITHOLOGIST)

The year of my birth was marked by a great calamity felt by every farmer and indirectly by every inhabitant of our middle western community for it was the year when great armies of grasshoppers marched across the fields and through the orchards. And after the armies had passed there was not a green thing left to show where the farmer had dropped the seed. The winter that followed was not a time of plenty and no doubt the eighth child meant one more mouth to feed. But the child (born Dec. 29, 1874) survived and enjoyed the privilege of being one of a large family where there is always something doing. At the age of six, the precarious life of the farm was given up and the family moved to the near-by town of Windsor, MO. An eight acre place allowed of just as much freedom as before except that school work and the attendant contagious diseases kept one housed.

In 1884 the three Sanborn brothers migrated to California (Amelia says 1888, but her manuscript contains a number of typos). Isaac's eldest boy, Arthur, was the first to go. Hired by a Missouri neighbor to ride with a trainload of cattle, feeding and caring for them, he liked California too much to leave. His letters persuaded the rest of the family to come. Most likely the family moved by wagon and flatboat to St. Louis, boarded a train which took them to Pomona and separated at Pomona; Isaac's family staying there and Alfred continuing on to Los Angeles while John took his family to El Cazon. Winfred, Alfred's teenage son vividly remembered the migration, walking next to the wagon and shooting rabbits for the travellers.

Isaac's family quickly established themselves as successful pioneers in Pomona, living in a large house on Pearl St. His eldest son, Arthur and Arthur's sons John and Carlton, were contractors and bricklayers who built the Pilgrim Congregational Church, the YMCA, the original Los Angeles High School and many other landmarks in Pomona and Claremont. They also built for themselves the first cannery in Pomona, supplied in part by Sanborn apple orchards where they produced applesauce and other canned goods. Arthur's other son, Leslie, was an early film developer who apparently worked with D.W. Griffith on the remarkable film, BIRTH OF A NATION.

Isaac's wife Anna, a Mt. Holyoke graduate, was more interested in intellectual pursuits than housework. Her daughter Alice ran the household. Anna served on the Pomona schoolboard and helped to instigate Pomona College. In this capacity she often received school material salesmen and other businessmen at her home in Pomona. She would wear a black silk dress and usher her guests into the front parlor for their business conference. Her youngest daughter, Flora Anna, a mathematical genius, married Russell K. Pitzer, who later founded Pitzer College.

In this richly educated atmosphere, Amelia cultivated her own interests. Turning again to her autobiography:

...Seven years were spent in Pomona, in the center of the great valley which was just beginning to be cleared for the planting of orange trees. While in Pomona College, I had a course in Zoology under Prof. A.J. Cook and for a week made a special study of bird skins. But I cannot remember that it ever occurred to me that I might see these birds in life if I would make the effort to find them....After graduating in 1895, I prepared to take the examinations for the teacher's certificate and in January, 1896, took a school in a little country district on the slope of Smith Mountain. The next year was spent in Whittier which at that time was a small settlement not yet conscious of the great wealth which lay buried in their hills though oil was even then visible upon the surface in Brea Canyon. A year and a half was devoted to teaching mathematics in the Los Angeles High School. By Jan. 1899, the young man to whom I had been engaged for several years, had finished his work for his Ph.D. and was established in Berkeley as Professor in the Greek department of the University. We were married on Jan. 4, and since that date my home has been in Berkeley.

Motherhood was most cruel to Amelia and the joy of the birth of her daughter Dorothy Martha Allen in 1901 was quickly crushed by the baby's death in the spring of the next year. In 1909, a mother for the second and last time, Amelia and James had a son, James Jr. Conflicting reports indicate that he was either brain damaged at birth or a Downes Syndrome child.

Amelia makes no mention of her children's tragedies in her autobiography, but focusses on her ornithological development. In the September, 1945 issue of THE CONDOR, a lovely visit to the Allen home is described:

The occasion was a pleasant one socially, and in addition there was an ornithological feature of remarkable interest. The bird feeding table just outside the large plate window of the dining room where breakfast was served...was continually patronized by numerous avian visitors....The differential lighting on the two sides of the window, darker within than without, doubtless in part accounted for the charming oblivious-ness of the birds. Within the considerable company of people was able to observe the birds closely under most comfortable conditions, even to comment upon them freely in ordinary conversational pitch of voice, without alarming or distracting the principals in the nature play being acted outside."

As an outgrowth of observations made at this window, Mrs. Allen began to band birds with bands received in May 1918 from H.H. Cleaves. She then became the first bander in California. Her own account of this early banding, as published in 1922 (U.C. CHRONICLE, p. 102) included the following information. "The first bird to be marked in this way was a Brown Towhee, which was accidentally caught February 11, 1919. Since that time his mark of identification is easily seen as he feeds on the table, and he is never missing. The next bird to be banded was a Fox Sparrow which was caught in a basement room, March 29, 1919. He migrated with his kind to Alaska soon after, but returned to his winter boarding place November 3, 1919. On April 24, 1920, he started on his second summer trip to Alaska and returned safely again on November 7, 1920. Two Golden crowned Sparrows were likewise banded March 3, 1920, made their summer journeys to Alaska, where they raise their young, and returned one on October 23, the other November 15, 1920, and one again on October 25, 1921."

Such diligent and patient work made Amelia Sanborn Allen one of the most respected ornithologists in the country. In an era when women were rarely seen in scientific circles, Amelia's contributions could not be ignored and her papers were often seen in leading ornithological journals.

After an illness of several years, Amelia died 13 Feb 1945 and her husband received condolences from around the country. Her son James Jr. died the same year and her husband, Professor Allen, remarried, but Amelia's family papers were preserved. Two fine diaries have been donated to the Museum at Yosemite National Park, detailing her visits in the early part of this century.

Sanborn Family Reunion

CHICHESTER, Aug. 20. The eighth annual Sanborn reunion was held at the Grange hall on Tuesday with an attendance of 150. Those traveling the farthest to attend this Old Home Week function were the Misses Sanborn from Pasadena, Cal. Prayer was offered by Rev. NOTES

It was with deep regret that we learned of the death of Ralph D. Sanborn, brother of Harriet Sanborn Price. Mrs. Price has been a outstanding SFA contributor in the abstraction program of MA Vital Records. We all extend our heartfelt sympathies to Mr. Sanborn's family.

Thank you to the reader who supplied information about the inherited condition called Dupuytren's Contracture. Any other such traits for our statistical study?

Your editor is extremely gratified by the almost continual outpouring of offers of help, research, family compilations and pictures. I am now in the process of sorting these offers to coordinate research projects to the best advantage. Many of you indicate that you have never done family research before and I hope to be able to include a detailed set of directions with my reply. After the birth of my son (9 months and counting at press time!), I will begin sending out research kits for use in courthouses, etc. If you would like to volunteer, please write to the Association in care of the Editor/Genealogist and state the geographical area you would be willing to search and name any major libraries to which you have access.

Remember, everyone can help simply by filling out a lineage chart. These charts are free, just write to the Association for a blank form and fill it out as far back as you are able to go.

Some extremely interesting information has been received from the English researcher hired by the Association to look into the identity of the unknown Sanborne and to learn the fate of his widow, Ann Bachiler Sanborn Atkinson. Earlier researchers such as V.C. Sanborn never concentrated on the area where the family was known to have lived, but focused instead on the family name's ancestral home. Another report is expected shortly. The English research fund always welcomes donations for this important project.

Wish to learn more of SARAH BARTLETT, wife of JOHN PRESCOTT SANBORN JR. (#775) and ANNA ROWE, mother of JOHN PRESCOTT SANBORN SR. (#299). One SARAH BARTLETT was b 23 May 1792 to JOHN and MARY (SMITH) BARTLETT according to NH Vital Records, but Casey's = on the desc. of RICHARD BARTLETT of Newbury gives this family without a daughter SARAH. Also, is MARY SMITH, possible mother of SARAH, a desc. of NICHOLAS SMITH of Exeter?

Can anyone identify the THOMAS SAMBOURNE of Sheffield, England who died in Raleigh, NC in 1808? Has anyone seen a probate for his estate? Did he leave issue? He appears to have been an attorney. Only reference seen on him appears in the English publication, GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE.

THE QUAKER SANBORNS

In the records of the Chuckatuck Public Meeting House of the Society of Friends in Isle of Wight County, Virginia are traces of a Sanborn family ignored by all previous Sanborn researchers. The mysterious family of Daniel and Sarah Sanborn appears as early as 1687 as respected members of the Quaker society and in numerous instances provided a meeting place for the friends at their own home. By 1706, Daniel "Sanboarn" was giving permission to Joseph Woodson to marry his daughter Mary. Twelve years later, Sarah Sanborn made her last appearance in the Quaker records and nothing more of the family has been turned up to date.

Who are these Sanborns? We have always believed the unsubstantiated family tradition that Stephen Sanborn, one of the three sons of Ann Bachiler and the unknown Sanborn, returned to England with his grandfather, Rev. Stephen Bachiler, leaving a small family of daughters behind. His family is the only one of the very early Sanborns not fully accounted for. Could Daniel be one of his descendants? The other obvious possibility is that yet another branch of the English Sanborn family came to the Colonies and settled, perhaps only temporarily, near the Virginia-North Carolina border.

Has anyone seen studies of the descendants of Joseph and Mary Sanborn Woodson? Was Mary Daniel and Sarah's only child? The questions are endless. Do any of our readers have access to early Virginia records, perhaps in Richmond, VA or Salt Lake City or even Isle of Wight County? The new revision of the Sanborn genealogy would not be complete without reference to this family and it would be nice to know more about them.
