ANNA SANBORN HAMILTON AND THE LEAGUE OF AMERICAN PENWOMEN

by Ardith James

By standards of either the 19th or 20th century, Anna Sanborn Hamilton would be considered a talented and ambitious woman. Placed in the setting of the 19th century, however, her achievements of one hundred years ago were no less than amazing. Her resumé would tell us that she had a background in the classics and was a translator of languages. It would surely detail her work as a professional reporter for newspapers in Colorado and Pennsylvania prior to her employment as social editor of THE WASHINGTON POST. Her writing skills were constantly utilized as she crafted advertising copy designed to attract the woman buyer, numerous book reviews, and articles which were featured in the SYRACUSE POST and a variety of journals.

In Washington, DC she also taught English literature and served as a special proof reader for the government (1).

Mrs. Hamilton, as she was addressed in the manner of the day by even her closest friends, somehow found the time to serve as president of the largest women's club in the United States. Her leadership in the club called Wimodaughsis (an abbreviation for women/mothers/daughters/sisters?) earned her much respect around Washington. It was this reputation as an exceptional club woman and organizer which prompted Marion Longfellow O'Donoghue, niece of the famed Longfellow and herself a poet and writer, to invite Mrs. Hamilton to assist in the founding of a press club for women. Together with Margaret Sullivan Burke, Mrs. O'Donoghue and Mrs. Hamilton established in 1897 the organization now known as the National League of American Penwomen (2).

It is tempting to contemplate the probable factors which produced an ambitious woman such as Anna Sanborn Hamilton. Her birth order was likely favorable. Born 13 December 1848 in Rochester, New York, the second of fourteen children of Rodman Wilcox Sanborn (3) and his wife Elizabeth Willis, she came into the family the same year that her older brother died. Anna thus became the eldest of the children and seemed to have been given the advantages and responsibilities of that placement.

Her father was, according to genealogist V. C. Sanborn, "a man of ingenuity and great ability ..... an ice dealer on a large scale ....interested in several inventions," (4) and certainly an influence on his daughter. He was born in 1822 in Perrysburg, Chautauqua County, New York and came with his parents and siblings to Rochester when he and that city were both young. However, Rodman Wilcox Sanborn was not the only successful one in his family; his brothers John and William also prospered and gained worthy reputations while serving as role models to their offspring.

John, who sought his fortune in the California gold rush, was one of the few who struck it rich and managed to use his money wisely. After gifting his relatives and various charities, he constructed toll roads, bridges, and ferries in the California foothills, then invested in business in boomtown San Francisco. Eventually he and his wife built a grand home in rural Fruitvale, California. Fruitvale no longer exists but is part of Oakland, where today there is a Sanborn Park on Fruitvale Avenue across from the Fruitvale Center College.

William, the third of the brothers, moved to the Midwest in the mid-1800's and settled in Sterling, Illinois where he married and became a successful banker, engaging in various enterprises. Photographs of William's Illinois home and John's California home may be seen in V. C. Sanborn's book (5).

Anna Sanborn, the subject of this article, married Major Henry G. Hamilton (6) in 1874, one week before her twenty-sixth birthday, at a ceremony in Rochester. They lived in Washington, D.C. where he died in 1895 and was buried in the Arlington National Cemetery. Two years after Major Hamilton's death his wife helped found the League of American Penwomen. Although she tried at least once (in 1905) to resign from the club in order to simplify her life, she remained a loyal member, serving as the 13th President of the League 1911-1912. It was therefore fitting that following her death 6 April 1926, funeral services for Anna Sanborn Hamilton were conducted at the League Club House, 1709 H Street in Washington (7).

The National League of American Penwomen today is alive and well and now claims more than 6000 members who work in the fields of Art, Letters, and Music. Branches located throughout the country provide programs, demonstrations, symposiums and support for their membership. The San Bernardino, California branch of the N.L.A.P.W. is unique in having an annual exhibit of artworks and writings. Their October 1991 exhibition at the University of Redlands featured poems specially written to reflect the theme, mood, and beauty of each photograph and painting on display. Conversely, in alternate years artworks are created to portray and complement the poetry.

Headquarters for the N.L.A.P.W. remain in the capital city. Housed in a mansion formerly occupied by the Lincoln family, the League maintains biographical archives, a 3000-volume library, a hall of fame and research programs. The organization, which also provides scholarships and awards, has itself been a recipient of the Literary Hall of Fame award (8).

Mrs. Hamilton would have been proud!

The regiment joined the Army of the Potomac in November and first saw action at Fredericksburg. Over the next two and one half years the 140th fought in numerous important campaigns and battles, including Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Rappahannock Station, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Bethesda Church, Picket Line, Petersburg, Five Forks, et al.. They were present at the surrender of Lee and his army at Appomatox. In August of 1864 Hamilton was advanced to the rank of Captain, bestowed by brevet for services during the Wilderness Campaign. When the regiment mustered out in Washington, D.C. on 3 June 1865, Hamilton signed over to the regular army.

BOOKSHELF

The "Genealogical Helper" has a department each issue that concerns the use of personal computers (PCs) in genealogy. The Nov/Dec 1991 issue (p 200) has an article, "Using Your Computer for Genealogical Research" by Harry Liget that is a short article worth reading. Ideas for use of word processors, database for research log, correspondence and the use of a telephone modem for queries to "bulletin boards" as well as data collection are described. It is not an introduction to computers, nor discussion of what programs or computer hardware to buy, but gives good suggestions on how to use what most computers already have.

"Genealogical Computing" is a quarterly journal published by "Ancestry, Inc" in Salt Lake City, UT; PO Box 476; zip 84110. Subscriptions are $25 annually, less with a membership in "Ancestry Research Club". The issues describe what is available in computers & equipment and programs applicable to the genealogists' needs. They have a good mix of articles for the beginner and on up through advanced material.

"PC Novice" magazine, available on the news stands and by subscription, has been found to be helpful to beginning computer users.

BACK ISSUES OF "SANBORN SIGNATURES": may be purchased for $2 from the SFA Secretary, Ruth MacPherson. Volume II, issue 2 for spring 1986 is again available, though was once out of print.

I am greatly encouraged by reports received in 1991 from our English researcher, Michael J. Wood, Esq., of London, that we are on the right track of our English ancestral line. His detailed reports indicate strongly, that Richard Samborne of Herriard, Hampshire, may have been the father of the three Samborne immigrants. The only "problem" with this is that Richard was about 20 years older than Ann Bachiler - not impossible, but unusual. Discovery of estate papers for Herriard mentions Richard Samborne and "Mr. Bachiler", the minister, all in the same documents further support this tentative connection. I might add, that this appearance of (Mr?). Bachiler comes during the several years in which we previously had no record of his whereabouts, so it is interesting to see him popping up here.

Mrs. Rumsey, Michael Wood's sub-contract researcher for work outside London, exhaustively searched Hampshire sources for Bachiler's ordination records, but his name is not there. She feels he probably was ordained in Oxfordshire, since that is where he went to college, so I have asked her to search ordination records there.

We have turned our attention to Richard Samborne of Herriard and are trying to place him in the family so that we can research around him and try to find more evidence. Notice page 34-35 in V.C. Sanborn's genealogy. Michael Wood thinks Edward Samborne might have been the father of Richard Samborne of Herriard. It's interesting that V.C. Sanborn did not know about Richard Samborne of Herriard, but thought there was a Herriard connection, and also suggested that Edward might very likely be our branch of the family.

Though Richard Samborne of Herriard was born about 1579, according to his age on depositions, he is NOT the Richard Samborne born in 1579, son of Richard and Ann (Milborne) Samborne of Wells, Somerset as at first believed. It is a coincidence that there seems to have been two Richards born about the same time. Mr. Wood thinks Edward Samborne may be the father of Richard of Herriard (redundant) and it is possible. However, I have asked Mr. Wood and Mrs. Rumsey to concentrate on the family of John Samborne, brother of Edward Samborne and of Rev James Samborne. Nothing is known about this John, except that his uncle John of Timsbury left him a right to a cottage in Timsbury. The younger John was a son of Nicholas Samborne of Andover, Hampshire, very close to Herriard, Wherwell, etc. Nicholas owned an estate in Rodbourne Cheney, Wiltshire not far away, and no one has ever searched there to see what records there might be. It is possible that his son John, about whom we know nothing, lived there. I've asked the researchers to see what records Rodbourne Cheney might have. Rev. James Samborne was NOT our ancestor but he and his son, Rev. James Samborne of Upper Clatford, were close associates of Stephen Bachiler and also appear in the court rolls and documents of Herriard, and are mentioned in the wills of the owners of Herriard, who were strong Puritans and members of Parliament - Bachiler's kind of folks.

Ann Samborne, who married Rev. Anthony Gattonby, was a first cousin of Edward, Rev. James and the John who may have been in Rodbourne Cheney, Wiltshire, so this strengthens my desire to search in the latter place. The Gattonbys are mentioned frequently in connection with Andover, Rev. James Samborne, Timsbury and various places in Hampshire. I feel that we have definitely isolated the branch of the English Samborne family to which we belong. It's now a matter of time-consuming searches in various locations in ancient documents to find conclusive evidence of the right links.

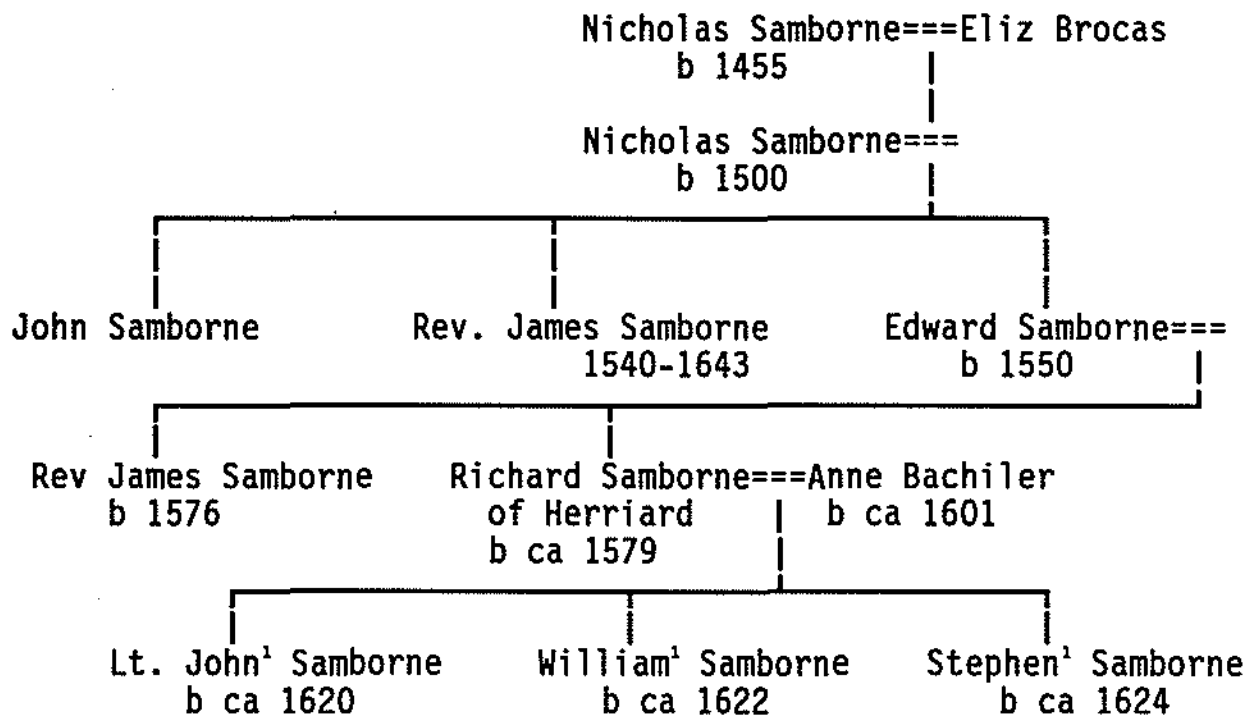

I'm expecting a report from Michael Wood any day now in response to my letter and instructions to him of 22 October 1991.

Earlier issues of Sanborn Signatures have asked our readers to send in their nomination for the oldest photograph taken of a Sanborn descendant. It's the age of the photograph that counts, not the age of descendant. So far we have one of Isaac Sanborn and his wife Elizabeth Drown. He was born 1797. Daguerreotypes were the first photographs and appeared in 1840. Prizes are offered to the persons submitting the 3 oldest photographs.
